To Fundashon Mariadal,

I attended the hospital today for medical documentation of injuries resulting from repeated assaults. The report I received does not accurately reflect the full extent of my injuries.

The treating nurse practitioner declined to review the photographic evidence of my injuries, stating that the police already have the images. These photographs are part of my current medical condition and must be considered in any clinical assessment.

In addition, the nurse practitioner refused to provide an English-language copy of the report. Because the report was only given to me in Dutch, I had to use an online translator to understand its contents. After translating it myself, I discovered that several of the documented findings are incomplete or inaccurate.

Specifically, the report does not document the following current, visible, and physically verifiable injuries:

- persistent swelling of my right hand,
- pain and reduced ability to close or use my right hand,
- ongoing pain in the left hand,
- symptoms consistent with manual strangulation,
- head trauma symptoms,
- abdominal pain,
- and related injuries from the assaults.

These symptoms continue to be present. I am still in the hospital waiting area requesting a proper evaluation. I require an accurate, complete, and medically correct record for health and legal reasons.

I am therefore requesting that a supervising doctor review my case and conduct a full reassessment, including all visible injuries and symptoms, and that this reassessment be documented accurately in English so that I can understand my own medical record.

Please confirm when I can be seen by a supervising doctor.

Sincerely,

jessica leigh collins

To Fundashon Mariadal,

I have now received the English-language version of my medical report at approximately 1:15 pm by a man name Jamar (no sir name provided). After reviewing it carefully, I documented multiple factual inaccuracies that must be corrected. For legal, medical, and safety reasons, my record must reflect what I actually reported and the injuries that are still present.

Below is a list of inaccuracies in the report:

1. I did not state that I was abused by a partner.
2. I did not state that I was strangled to the point of fainting. I stated that I fainted the following day after a strangulation assault the night before.
3. I did not report being punched several times in the abdomen. I reported a single abdominal assault.
4. The report states there were “no visible injuries,” yet also notes swelling of the right hand and middle finger. Additional visible signs remain, including persistent swelling and signs consistent with hematoma.
5. I did not state that I fell on my right elbow. I stated that I was assaulted and thrown onto the ground inside the house.
6. Injuries and pain in my left hand were not documented.
7. I did not report that my hair was pulled.
8. My vertigo symptoms were recorded inaccurately. I reported severe dizziness when standing up, causing stumbling, not mild dizziness while sitting.
9. I was not asked about headaches.
10. I was not asked about vision problems.
11. I was not advised to take painkillers.

11. I was not advised to take painkillers.

12. I was not advised to rest or take it easy.

These inaccuracies materially affect the documentation of the assaults and my current medical condition.

I am again requesting that a supervising doctor review my case and conduct a full reassessment, with accurate findings recorded in English. I remain available for evaluation.

Please confirm when I can be seen by a supervising doctor.

Sincerely,

jessica leigh collins

Dear Hospital Administration,

I am documenting the events that occurred today regarding the inaccurate medical report prepared by the nurse practitioner. After I reported the inaccuracies in writing, the manager and the staff member who provided the English report took me into the examination room. When the nurse practitioner left the room and stated that she would remove all the inaccurate information and everything else except what she could see with her eyes, staff member Nicolas Jamar made a threatening remark and told me to be careful because I was standing on my tiptoes. During this process they repeatedly attempted to keep the paperwork I had been given. I again stated the incorrect information recorded by the nurse practitioner. She documented statements that I never made, including claims of partner abuse, multiple abdominal punches, and that I fell. She also documented that no injuries were visible while simultaneously noting swelling to my middle finger, swelling to my right hand, and signs of hematoma that match the timeline I provided. These inconsistencies were not corrected. I asked to speak with a supervising doctor so the false information could be corrected in the medical record. That was not permitted. My request to speak with a supervising doctor stands. The inaccuracies must be corrected in the medical record because they materially affect the documentation.

Sincerely,

jessica leigh collins
